

Manned Intervention

Wednesday 16th April 2008

Melbourne Hotel (John De Baun Room), Corner of Hay & Milligan Street, Perth
Registration 5:30pm: Presentations Start at 6:00pm: Drinks and Canapés 7:30pm

Chaired by: Keith Bentley: Senior Subsea System Engineer, Inpex Browse Ltd.

Although there is now a great reliance on the work class remotely operated vehicle within the commercial market place, manned intervention continues to supply a necessary and crucial role.

This evening, four organizations will be presenting informative insights into the training, physiology and evolution of manned intervention along with recent examples of current operations – both offshore and inland – and the support equipment necessary to undertake those tasks.

Air Diving in 2008

Dusty Miller: Operations Manager, TUCF

Staying Alive in Saturation

Ray Farrier: Business Development Manager, LMTS/Hallin Marine

Ray will describe the support required and the problems faced by divers living at the equivalent water depth of 500 feet in a saturation chamber for 28 days.

Warragamba Dam Deep Storage Recovery Project

Geoff Hogg: Commercial Manager, DOF Subsea

Under contract to Boulderstone Hornibrook, DOF Subsea Australia provided saturation diving and specialist tooling services to cut a single 2m x 2m opening through a 1.75m thick concrete wall at Warragamba Dam to enable access to the dams deep storage reserves in water depths of 60 to 90 metres

Angel 1TL Hot Tap

Jim Smith: Technical Manager, Technip Subsea 7 Asia Pacific Pty Ltd.

Jim will describe how the Hot Tap was carried out by TS7 on the Angel Trunkline for Woodside in Sept 2007.
